

Why do global climate models simulate clouds poorly?

- grid boxes are typically 250 km wide and 1 km high
- processes important for cloud formation happen at much smaller scales
- it is very difficult to represent clouds and small scale processes from only grid box mean properties

